Have your say on Darwin's future

Minister for Lands and Planning, Gerry McCarthy today announced that the public and stakeholders would get an additional two weeks to comment on the Territory Government's proposed Greater Darwin Plan.

Mr McCarthy said the comment period was scheduled to close this Friday, however he wanted to ensure everyone had ample time to share their opinions.

"This plan will guide Greater Darwin construction and planning for decades to come so it's important that the public, including our new council members, have an opportunity to comment," he said.

The Greater Darwin Plan has been developed in line with the Territory 2030 targets to grow Darwin as a key centre for oil and gas, and an international hub for exports, education and health services and tourism.
